Please join us on Tuesday, November 4th, 5:00-6:30 p.m., in Barnum 008, for a discussion marking the 40th anniversary of Boston's Educational Crisis. The Tufts Educational Studies Program is hosting a conversation on the historical and current educational implications of Boston's desegregation program and busing policies in the 1970s and 80s. Department of Education Professor Steve Cohen will consider the history of neighborhood and school segregation. Guest speaker Lyda Peters of Boston College will discuss Boston's Black community’s responses to these policies. Co-sponsored by the Tufts Educational Studies Program and the Africana Studies Program.
