LIBERIAN WOMEN'S CHORUS for CHANGE WORKSHOP

free; no tickets required

Thursday, November 8th @ 10am

Fisher Performance Hall, Granoff Music Center

Facilitators Fatu Gayflor, from the Liberian Women's Chorus for Change and cultural anthropologist Toni Shapiro-Phim will discuss and demonstrate the use of traditional songs and dances (here from Liberia, West Africa) to foster dialogue and address social justice concerns. As part of the workshop, participants will be invited to experience the performance of collective songs and dances under the guidance of Ms. Gayflor.

This event is part of the week-long 'Music and Social Justice' residency.

This workshop was made possible by the Granoff Music Fund, the Diversity Fund, and the following institutions:
