
Panel Discussion
Tuesday, November 1, 2011
12:00-1:15pm

Location: 2456 Rayburn House Office Building

Guatemalans will elect their next president on November 6. Oxfam America, the Washington Office on Latin America, the Center for International Environmental Law and Tufts University’s Center for Global Development and Environment are convening a panel to examine the election’s stakes for human rights, citizen security and natural resource issues in Guatemala. The panel will also address the implications for U.S. policy and for Guatemala’s role in the Central America region.

Speakers

Helen Mack
Myrna Mack Foundation and head of the Police Reform Commission, Guatemala City

Kris Genovese
Senior Attorney, Center for International Environmental Law

Lyuba Zarsky
Researcher, Center for Global Development and Environment, Tufts University

Keith Slack
Extractive Industries Program Manager, Oxfam America

Moderator

Maureen Meyer
Senior Associate, Washington Office on Latin America

Lunch will be provided

Space is limited and RSVPs are required. Please RSVP by noon on Friday, October 28 to Kathryn Martorana - kmartorana@oxfamamerica.org.