Tufts Positive Development through Sports and Coaching Study

Research Assistant Job Description

The Institute for Applied Research in Youth Development at Tufts University is seeking research assistants for work on a research project investigating the development of character virtues in youth sport coaches participating in a workshop lead by the Positive Coaching Alliance.

The greatest need is for this project will include preparing materials for data collection, data entry, conducting data collection at youth sport organizations in the greater Boston area (for example, administering questionnaires), and other miscellaneous project-related tasks, such as video coding, audio transcription, and clerical work. We are seeking team members who are personable, professional, and dependable. Experience working with youth and audio-/video-recording is preferred, but not required. Flexibility in schedule is needed for data collection; however, the schedule for other project-related tasks is flexible. Compensation will be commensurate with experience with the opportunity to work 10-20 hours/week.

Please send a resume and a brief paragraph describing your interest in the job and relevant experience to Jun Wang at j.wang@tufts.edu.