

You're Invited To Attend!
A Community of Learning:
Best Practices in Service-Learning at Community Colleges Across Massachusetts

- Are you interested in learning more about service-learning?
- Do you want to learn models for successful service-learning in a community college setting (while dealing with faculty workloads, busy students, and other challenges)?
- Do you teach service-learning courses and would you like the opportunity to showcase your accomplishments?
- Would you like to hear what service-learning strategies work best for other faculty?

Then this half-day institute is for you!

Are you a faculty member at a Massachusetts community college who is interested in showcasing your work as a model for successful service-learning practice? E-mail jdolan@hcc.mass.edu and let us know if you would like to showcase your work and/or participate in facilitating a roundtable.

The Institute's keynote speaker will be Professor Donna Killian Duffy of Middlesex Community College. Professor Duffy has assisted numerous state, regional, and national peer institutions with the establishment and development of service-learning programs. Her talk will focus on successful strategies for student learning and examples of best practices at community colleges across the state will be highlighted. Later in the day, breakout sessions will include topics ranging from the fundamentals of service-learning practice to special topics in service-learning such as Learning Communities and service-learning.
